

Choosing the best DWARF HAMSTER CAGE

Being a very high-energy animal means Dwarf Hamsters require a dedicated, well crafted-habitat to call home. Meeting your Dwarf Hamsters' needs will allow them to live full, happy lives.

Cage Size

PRIORITIZE FLOOR SPACE
OVER
HEIGHT SPACE

Cage Types

Wire cages have great circulation and air quality, but poor insulation, and require a plastic bottom to avoid injuries

OR

Glass cages have great insulation and protection from drafts, but not much ventilation or air flow, and condensation is a concern

Cage Habitat

Bedding – burrowing is a favorite pastime, so a quarter inch of bedding is best

Gnawing Pieces – hamsters need something to chew on regularly to keep their teeth healthy

Food and Water – a tablespoon of dry food daily and access to water at all times are required

Nest Boxes – sleeping 12–14 hours a day, they prefer hidden areas with one box per hamster

Active Pieces – climbing equipment and wheels are great options for regular exercise

Cage Placement

65–75 F

No Drafts

No Pets

Quiet

If you are considering getting a dwarf hamster, keep in mind that these small, furry creatures require the same amount of love, attention and respect as any other pet that lives in your home.

